Neonatal sepsis results in a spectrum of changes in gastrointestinal (GI) permeability which include edema of the mucosal lining, inflammation of the crypts, and crypt cell apoptosis. We have previously shown that neonatal rats are more vulnerable to LPS-induced septic shock, and that this increased sepsis susceptibility can be reversed by delivery of the neutral endopeptidase inhibitor (NEPi) phosphoramidon, as well as an NEPi-resistant transgenic NEP variant. In the present study, we investigate whether the intestinal environment in LPS-treated rats is receptive to NEPi protection. We demonstrate that pre- or post-LPS treatment with phosphoramidon prevented the LPS-induced decrease in transepithelial electrical resistance (TER) of the Caco-2 epithelial cell monolayer and the subsequent LPS-induced loss of intercellular tight junction proteins, occludin and ZO-1. Likewise, phosphoramidon treatment prevented the LPS-induced decrease in TER and decrease in mucin-1 (MUC-1) expression in vivo. LPS exposure also resulted in a marked increase in levels of interleukin-1 β (IL-1 β) and IL-6, and LPS-induced levels were decreased in phosphoramidon-treated rats, as well as in occludin-deficient mice. We conclude that LPS-induced early alterations in the gut barrier are related to dysregulation of NEP activity, and that treatment with phosphoramidon, or transgenic NEPi-resistant variants of the enzyme can prevent these alterations. So thought I'd post my question here. I am performing an http get request in an AsyncTask but nothings happening. the onPostExecute() method is not being called and i do not get any errors in my Logcat. the UI is getting stuck as the call to the getJSON() starts running and the user is waiting for it to end. i have read the AsyncTask guide a bunch of times but must be missing something fundamental. please take note: it is a mixture of Android API 11 and 12 so I have put the signature for the execute method in the old way. If you need to see my exact code then just ask :) class

GET_JSON extends AsyncTask { String url, out; String json_string; protected String doInBackground(String... uri) { try { URL url = new URL(uri[0]);
HttpURLConnection con = (HttpURLConnection)
url.openConnection(); InputStream in = con.getInputStream(); BufferedReader buffer = new BufferedReader(new InputStreamReader(in)); out = ""; while ((out = buffer.readLine())!= null) { System.out.println(out); } con.disconnect(); return out; } catch
